Comb Blocks for Clue to The Origin of Horrible
Conflagration

SOME CONVICTS TESTIFY

Relatives Gather at Ohio State
Fair Grounds to Claim
The Bodies

COLUMBUS, O., Apr. 23.—(INS).—While relatives of the victims of the most tragic fire in the history of United States penal institutions gathered at the State Fair Grounds at Columbus, Ohio, today to claim the bodies of 317 who died in the Ohio State Prison fire, the committee of investigators appointed by Governor Myers Cooper began a minute examination of the scorched cell blocks.

Sobbing women, the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts, of the fire victims gathered at an early hour before the Horticultural Building where the bodies have been held. All day yesterday undertakers embalmed the bodies and placed them in shrouds after each body had been finger printed by experts. Finger prints were taken to help identify fifty men so badly burned as to make identification impossible.

Today at the Penitentiary, Attorney General Gilbert Bettman, members of his staff, and John J. Chester, Jr., Franklin County prosecutor, were combing the cell blocks G and H where the men died, for a clue as to the fire's origin.

It was believed from testimony taken last night the fire started from defective lighting wires in the new cell block under construction I and K adjoining cell block G and H. Liston C. Schooley, William R. Noel and George W. Johnson, all convicts who rendered themselves as heroes during the blaze, and prison guard, Augustus Light, all testified during the evening that they were among the first on the scene and that the first flames they saw came from the power lines strung along the top of the cell blocks.

"I want to strike while the iron is hot. The human element in this tragedy is apparently too prone to forget just what really happened. Testimony so far points to gross negligence on the part of certain members of the penitentiary force. I intend to get at the bottom of this thing in the shortest possible time."

Attorney General Bettman made this statement last night at the conclusion of more than twelve hours' quizzing of officials and convicts.

From the day's testimony the key to the charges of gross negligence lay in the fact of whether the north gate leading to the upper tiers of cells in Block G and H was not delayed in opening. Four different versions of the opening of this gate were given.

Thomas Watkinson, guard at the gate who was suspended pending the investigation by Warden Thomas, testified that he held the keys to the gate and refused to open it on orders from his superior officer, Captain John Hall, 71. Hall in turn stated that he issued no orders regarding the opening of the gate which would allow men with keys to the cells to go to the upper tiers.

Among the fifteen witnesses which are to be called today will be F. L. Jenkins, superintendent of building construction who was in charge of building the new cell block in which the fire is believed to have started. It is believed that warden Thomas will be called back for further testimony regarding his procedure during the fire.

Amphibian Lands on Nose In River; Pilot Not Hurt

Paul Hovgard, test pilot for the Keystone Aircraft Corporation, gave a thrill yesterday afternoon when a test plane of the amphibian commuter type, landed in the Delaware River. The nose tipped forward and the plane stood upward for a brief interval.

The ship leaped forward on its nose and then settled back into its normal resting position. Hovgard was not hurt, but the nose of the plane was slightly damaged. Employees of the Keystone Company put out in a motor launch and brought the stranded pilot to shore.

U. S. DELEGATES NOW EN ROUTE TO HOMELAND

Thoughts of Sleep is First in Minds of Group As They Board Leviathan

DEPARTURE A GAY ONE

By Harry R. Flory
L. N. S. Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Apr. 23.—Their long and tedious task completed, American delegates to the London Naval Conference sailed for home aboard the Leviathan early today.

The huge United States liner pulled away from Southampton Harbor just as dawn was breaking over the solent. The delegates, fatigued and weary, were fast asleep in their staterooms and had been from a few minutes after they boarded the vessel at 8.30 last evening.

It was an unusually gay departure, for the new night-club of the vessel had been kept open for the special benefit of the delegates. Not one of them, however, had the desire for anything else but sleep. Other passengers took advantage of the unexpected entertainment and danced until the early hours of the morning.

With conclusion of the conference and departure of the Americans, the British press launched into an almost unanimous expression of approval over the parley's achievement in bringing about a complete limitation treaty between Great Britain, the United States and Japan, and providing the means for broadening it into a five-power pact when France and Italy compose their tonnage differences.

A statement made unexpectedly by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald some hours after the conference had closed was regarded with considerable significance today. Thanking members of the press for their "forbearance and co-operation," MacDonald said that during the closing days of the parley "not only a three-power pact but a four-power agreement perhaps was possible."

LINDBERGH SAYS PRESENT YEAR WILL SEE THE GREATEST ADVANCES IN AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY; FEW PIONEERING FLIGHTS YET REMAIN, HE SAYS

Lone Eagle to Open Mail Service That Will Bring New York,
Chicago, and Other U. S. Cities Within Easy Reach of South American Cities

By Homer H. Metz
L. N. S. Aviation Editor
NEW YORK, Apr. 23.—"The present year will see the aircraft industry make its greatest advances."

This statement was made exclusively to International News Service here today by none other than Colonel Charles Lindbergh, shortly after it became known that the famous ocean flyer is to inaugurate the Pan-American airways system's new seven day air mail service to South America by flying 1200 miles across the Caribbean Sea on Saturday.

Besides opening a mail service that will bring New York, Chicago, Kansas City, Washington, Atlanta and other American cities within easy reach of the metropolises of South America, Lindbergh's contemplated flight will mark the first time that the Caribbean has been crossed in a direct line by a transport plane. The flight will be made in a standard Pan-American amphibian plane, which besides its famous pilot will carry a radio operator, who will report the progress of the water "hop."

"Flying has now definitely passed the experimental stage," Lindbergh declared. "Only a few pioneering flights yet remain to be made and they will be made this year."

When asked whether his recent record-breaking one-stop flight across the country from Los Angeles was a pioneering flight, Lindbergh replied with an emphatic yes.

"My flight from Los Angeles to New York proved conclusively that much is to be gained by cross-country flyers who fly at high altitudes. Flying at heights between 10,000 and 15,000 feet the pilot finds that greater speed is possible and better weather conditions are encountered."

Lindbergh's transcontinental flight was made at an approximate height of 15,000 feet.

"I was really surprised myself at the speed we were able to make at 15,000 feet," Lindbergh said. "I believe we averaged nearly 150 miles an hour all the way from Los Angeles. At high altitudes, the air is much rarer than it is nearer the earth and as a consequence an airplane is faced with a minimum of resistance. Moreover, wind conditions are always better higher up. Storms and other bad weather areas seldom extend higher than 10,000 feet and the pilot who flies high has a distinct advantage over the man who stays nearer the earth."

The lone eagle voiced a vehement denial of the claim that the aviation industry will find its progress retarded during the next few years because of over-production by manufacturers. "The answer to that claim," he said, "is that there are more people flying now than ever before and that there are scarcely enough planes to go around."

In commenting upon what is in store for aviation during the present year, Lindbergh predicted that the winter of 1930 would be airlines, carrying both mail and passengers in virtually every section of the country and the civilized world.

"It is no longer necessary for flying men to make the public air-minded," he said. "They are air-minded. All that is necessary now is to convince the public that traveling by air is vastly superior to other means of travel. That is the job the flying man is confronted with in 1930. He will be able to handle it easily."

Lindbergh's inauguration of the Pan American Airways mail route will cut down the steamer schedule between this country and South America by thirteen days.

According to J. T. Trippe, president of Pan American Airways, who made the announcement of the flight, it will now be possible to mail a letter in any of the principal American cities on Friday and have it received in any of the principal cities of South America on the same day the following week.

"Inauguration of this world's fastest scheduled air mail service is a mile stone in the progressive development and expansion of the United States air mail service to Central and South America," Trippe declared.

HIGH SCHOOL ANNEXES WIN OVER LANGHORNE

Three-Run Rally in The Last
Inning Results in 6 to 5
Victory

THIRD WIN OF SEASON

Bristol High School annexed its third victory of the Lower Bucks County League yesterday when it staged a three-run rally in the last inning to down Langhorne High School, 6-5, on the latter's field.

Up until the fatal frame, Davis of Langhorne High, was pitching wonderful ball, and seemed to have the game tucked away when trouble began to brew. Moran, first up, waited for four bad ones, and walked. Massilla hit one down the third base line. The third baseman in his anxiety to get his man at first, fumbled the ball, making both runners safe. Gaffney sacrificed the men to second and third base. D. Stallone reached first on an error, scoring Moran. Lafferty hit a slow scribbler towards first, which he beat out for a hit, scoring Massilla. DeLorenzo batted for Reese and was hit with a pitched ball, filling the sacks. Rotunno was sent in to run for DeLorenzo. Pico hit to third base and was out at first. D. Stallone scoring with the winning run. J. Stallone was sent in to bat for Narcisi, but Rotunno was caught off third and declared out for running out of the base line.

The Cardinal and Gray team collected nine hits off Davis while Langhorne's squad nipped the Bristol hurlers. Harte and Narcisi for the same number. The Bristol pitchers were aided by snappy fielding which pulled them out of several holes. At one time when the Langhorners were threatening, a fast double play, Stromp to Pico to Stallone, put the fire out.

Twelve stolen bases were recorded during the day. Bristol baserunners being credited with eight while the opposing team got four.

"Bill" Harte, Bristol's chief moundman, was injured in the sixth inning, and forced to leave the game. Coach (Continued on Page 6)

MORRISVILLE WILL ENTERTAIN FIREMEN

Engine Contests Will Follow
March in Borough On July 4th

WILL AWARD PRIZES

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 23.—Although there will be no parade this year to be held in connection with the annual convention of the Bucks County Firemen's Association in June, Morrisville will stage on July 4 one of the largest firemen's parades ever held in Bucks County. At the last quarterly meeting of the county association held here last month, it was voted to hold the annual convention in Dublin; but there would be no parade there.

Capitol View Company, of this place, has since decided to act as host to the visiting firemen on Independence Day, and invitations have been issued to every company in the county to come to Morrisville to participate in the parade to be held in the afternoon. The line of march will be over the principal streets and the firemen will then proceed to the Island where various contests will be held.

Members of the Ladies' Auxiliaries of all the companies have also been invited and they will also participate in the parade.

Prizes will be awarded to the best-dressed fire company and best-dressed Auxiliary, to the fire company and ladies' auxiliary coming the longest distance. There will be prizes for pumper, chemical and other contests to be held on the Island.

Committees from the Capitol View Company and its auxiliary are busy completing plans for this event. The parade is expected to be larger than that in 1926 when the firemen's convention was held here, according to George W. Duke, president of Capitol View Company.

There are nearly 40 fire companies in Bucks County and it is expected every one of them will be represented in the parade. There will be plenty of music by bands and drum corps. Capitol View Company will have the local American Legion Bugle Corps to furnish music.

HULMEVILLE

On Thursday, April 24th, the Courier will begin the publication of a series of interesting articles dealing with the past and present of the Borough of Hulmeville.

The article has been prepared by a staff representative after numerous interviews, extensive consultation of histories and the delving into old records relative to this ancient and interesting community.

The first portion will deal at length with the founder, John Hulme, and his family, his business methods, and the commencement of growth of the early post village after his settlement there.

The early organizations, the first bank in Bucks County located at Hulmeville, the old dwellings and public buildings will be told of, as well as the later associations, churches, and community projects.

The articles will run for several days, so in order to insure receipt of copies, those not subscribing to the Courier are urged to order it at once. Prompt delivery is made early each evening.

BILL CARRIES $90,000 TO BE SPENT HERE

New Waterways Measure In Congress Carries Total of $110,000,000

MEASURE INTRODUCED

WASHINGTON, Apr. 23.—A total of $4,825,000 is provided for the improvement of the Delaware River in the omnibus Rivers and Harbors bill, which was introduced in the House Monday by Representative Dempsey, Republican, New York, chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee, after its approval by that committee.

Under terms of the bill, additional hundreds of thousands of dollars are to be spent on waterways in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware in the next year.

The bill authorizes projects to cost approximately $110,000,000. About 350 surveys of waterways and harbors throughout the country, and 160 other projects, are contemplated by the bill. A sum of $29,266,400 for deepening the Great Lakes connecting channels is the largest allotment.

According to Chairman Dempsey, the total shown in the bill represents a saving of $30,000,000 from the estimates submitted by the Board of Army Engineers, and additional savings from Upper Missouri, Tennessee and Upper Mississippi River estimates. The bill will be formally reported tomorrow, and brought up for action Friday.

The bill carries an appropriation of $90,000 for the channel project between Philadelphia and Trenton.

CENSUS FIGURES SHOW DECREASE IN 2 WARDS

Population in Second Drops
67, While That in Third
Falls 159

SURPRISE TO RESIDENTS

Much to the surprise of all the preliminary census figures thus far announced for two of the six wards of Bristol show a drop in population of over 200.

Figures have been made public for the second and third wards and in both instances there is a decrease in the number of residents over those enumerated at the 1920 count.

It is explained that the figures which are given out for the present census are subject to correction.

The second ward shows a falling off in population of 67 and the third ward shows a drop of 159, making a total decrease in the two wards of 226.

Francis G. Ellis, who was the enumerator in 1910, kept a copy of the records and has furnished the Courier with the figures for that year, taking the town as a whole and for each of the separate wards in 1920. Thomas Tanner was the enumerator in 1920, says Mr. Ellis.

The figures given the Courier for 1910 show that the town had a population of 9,256. In 1920 the total population was 10,273.

In the 1920 census the figures for each of the wards are given as follows: First, 2035; second, 1596; third, 1342; fourth, 2362; fifth, 2934.

In the 1910 census there were 21 barns and one farm enumerated in the second ward.

The second ward figures in the census just completed are 1527, and the third ward figures announced today are 1183. No farms are enumerated.

"NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH" WILL BE STAGED FRIDAY

Post, American Legion

AT SOUTH LANGHORNE

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Apr. 23.—Members and friends of Jesse W. Soby Post, No. 148, American Legion, and of the American Legion Auxiliary, as well as the public in general are eagerly waiting for the presentation of "Nothing But the Truth" which will be staged by the two organizations mentioned on Friday evening of this week at the Casino, here.

Through special arrangement with Samuel French of New York this fine play by James Montgomery being given. Mrs. Harold Crumline, of Langhorne, is directing.

A pronounced "hit" was made by "Nothing But the Truth" in motion picture form, and thousands have enjoyed stage presentations of it. The cast has been well chosen, and impersonators have been rehearsing tirelessly for the past six weeks.

The cast includes: E. M. Ralston, the part being taken by Warren Randall; Mrs. E. M. Ralston, Mrs. Thomas B. Longhurst; Gwen Ralston, their daughter, Mrs. Cecil McGary; Ethel Clark, Miss Mary Keating; Robert Bennett, Howard Ott; Clarence Vandusen, Joseph Zilott; Dick Donnelly, Rowland Wislar; Mabel Jackson, Miss Rose Bodenschütz; Sabel Jackson, Miss Elma E. Haefner; Bishop Doron, John Ziegler; Martha, the maid, Mrs. William Riggs.

The play is full of action and many humorous circumstances.

The audience will be much interested and highly amused at the manner in which Gwen with the aid of her fiancé, Bennett, doubles the $10,000 donated for her charity, in order to hold her father to his promise to give the equivalent of $20,000 should Gwen be able to raise that amount by a stated time.

Bennett's attempt to tell "nothing but the truth" for a period of 24 hours, places him in many trying circumstances. But all ends well.

Tickets may be procured from members of the Legion or auxiliary.

STATE POLICE GET LIQUOR CACHE IN FILIPPOW'S CELLAR

Place Value of $6,000 on The Liquor Found Secreted
In Basement

SEARCHING FOR OWNER

Trap Door in Living Room
Led to Place of Concealment

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 23.—State Police from the local sub-station in search of Nicholas Filippow, forty-seven, reputed "king of Bucks county's bootleggers," yesterday ran across a cache of liquor valued at $6,000 that was secreted away in a small cellar under the living room of Filippow's home on the Street Road, Warrington township, near here.

The officers confiscated thirteen fifty-gallon barrels of moonshine whiskey and took it to the county prison. A week ago the Filippow farm was raided when a still was confiscated, together with fifty gallons of alcohol and 2,000 gallons of mash. Filippow was not at home at the time and police went back yesterday in search of him. The raid at that time was made by County Detective Anthony Russo and State police.

In the living room of the Filippow home, under a library table the officers noticed a small lock that stuck out from the rug. Investigating they found a trap door leading down into a secret cellar that was separate from the rest of the cellar. Powerful stone walls protected the liquor cache.

Five years ago, Filippow, a giant in size, was arrested for operating a moonshine plant on his farm in secret underground rooms. He served a prison term here. Police records show that he was at one time held on a killing charge in St. Louis and a $10,000 robbery charge in Illinois in which counterfeit money-making machines were involved.

Police believe that he will be apprehended within a short time.

Four tables of pinocle players were arranged and at the conclusion of the games each guest received a package which contained an inexpensive prize, causing much merriment among the guests. Refreshments were served at a late hour. Mrs. Bruden and Miss Helsel received many pretty birthday gifts. Those who enjoyed this party were:

DEGRADATION OF SHORTCAKE

A rural correspondent voices in a communication a thought which has been in the minds of thousands but until now has not found adequate expression. He gives utterance to a feeling of regret, bitter and poignant, at the passing of old-fashioned strawberry shortcake, for, as he truly states, the food which is now masquerading as that delectable confection is a fraud and delusion unworthy of the name it bears. It is a timely and dignified protest against the degradation of what was once and still should be the noblest offering that can grace the vernal festival board and delight the palate of man.

The false strawberry shortcake is a sponge cake affair and the berries are not nutritious. The real thing, as the correspondent says, is made of soda biscuit, baked in bread pans, with plenty of "shortening" to make it light, and not too rich. A layer of the cake should be covered with berries crushed with sugar; on top of that another layer of cake and more berries; layers ad libitum, berries ad infinitum, "and on the top layer as many berries and as much juice as will stick." Compared with this, he says, "lots of eating is a piker's pastime." Those in whom ecstatic memories will be aroused by his description, and whose mouths will water as they read it, no doubt will heartily endorse his opinion.

Three hundred years ago old Izaak Walton, seeking to extol the gentle art of angling, could think of no higher praise of it than to compare it to the strawberry. It ranked among sports, he said, as the strawberry ranks among berries, and quoted with approval the words of Dr. William Butler: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did."

PROVERBS

Every old nation has a wealth of proverbs, one Spanish author collecting 25,000 in his mother tongue. Spain, it is believed, possesses the largest store, though the Arabs, Persians, Indians, Chinese and Japanese have unlimited numbers.

This generation may well ask itself sometime if modern Americanese is inventing sententious phrases that will live on to be known by posterity as American proverbs. Languages are largely known by their proverbs, for they give a language its color.

There are no such things as new proverbs since, like wine, they require aging. The very definition of a proverb, "A short, sententious phrase long current in common speech," shows that age gives the thought its flavor.

Among the best known old sayings are those dealing with sour grapes, looking the gift horse in the mouth, the prophet ignored elsewhere than at home, haste and waste, honesty and policy, a bird in the hand, and Rome was not built in a day.

SYNOPSIS

David Wade finds Stella Blackney, daughter of Mr. Blackney, who runs the only hotel in a white settlement in New Guinea, strangely concerned about his spree during which he was robbed of his savings. She tells him that O'Shane, the storekeeper, robbed him while he was drunk, but later tells O'Shane that Wade is only bluffing when he accuses him of the theft. Wade finds out the reason later. Stella has been forced to marry O'Shane, whom she loathes, by her disapproving mother. O'Shane is only waiting till her mother's death to claim his rights as a husband. In the meantime he is running with native girls.

But late in the afternoon she had But late in the afternoon she had gone to the store to make some purchases, and O'Shane tricked her into a room at the back. The immediate coming of the three white men, however, created a diversion; in the interests of selling them liquor and keeping them supplied, he left her alone for the time; and when the opportunity came she climbed through a window and escaped. Fearing unenviable publicity, she said nothing of her adventure to anyone save Stella, who had done her various kindnesses and was her friend.

Stella waved the girl away. Then she gathered herself into kneeling position, facing Wade, her hands the while moving restlessly, the fingers clenching and unclenching as from physical pain. "And that is the man I am married to! Even though he loves me, he cannot be faithful to me!"

"Just so," said Wade vaguely. "Still, if he really loved you I do not think he would go chasing after other women."

"Are you trying to pay a compliment to my powers of attraction? I did not think you were given to saying such empty things."

"I mean it in all seriousness. I do not believe one can love and be unfaithful at the same time."

"Then you know nothing about men and women and love. Why, the world is full of men who love their wives and are consistently unfaithful to them. And the same is true of women. Though single-hearted in the matter of affection, many people are polygamists in the matter of sex. You have been so long in these wilds that you have lost touch with the world of people and affairs. And I like you for it. It is one of the things that caused me to choose you as my possible helper. At least you are clear."

She regarded him very steadily. "I am afraid you think me non-moral and assertive. Perhaps I am. I don't know. I seem to have no certainty about anything, except that I must get away from this man. But I want you to believe I didn't ask you to take me away without carefully considering it first. Please say you believe me."

"I do indeed," he assured her promptly. "You were driven to it. I know that. You were desperate!"

"I am desperate," she beat her hands against her forehead. "If you fail me, I do not know what I shall do."

He flushed. "It's a horrible situation—" He halted, stammering, at a loss for words.

She moved a little closer. Her knee, pleasantly round, touched him, thrilling him.

"You wouldn't condemn me to a life with him?" The words throbbed from her. "I must get away! I must!"

"I—I know!" he said, casting about for change of topic, and adding desperately: "There is no doubt that it was he who robbed you. That girl's story was quite convincing. I will tackle O'Shane at once, and—"

"He will come to the hotel this evening. He comes every evening. There was absolute colourlessness in her tone. "Leave it to me. I will get your property back." And with that she rose and left him. He watched her enter the hotel; then slowly he got up and went walking aimlessly along the beach.

He was conscious of desire to help her. The possibility that, her mother being so ill, it might not now be long before she was claimed by the dreadful person who was his husband displeased him acutely, aroused his profoundest anger.

David Wade's youth had been spent in an environment, strictly conventional. His parents were city dwellers, unimaginative, unoriginal.

But their son revolted against this order of things. There was a title in his family, and he was next in succession—a circumstance for which the toll taken by the Great War among his connections was responsible. Despite there being no money attached to the title, he was a most matrimonially eligible young man.

Remarkable was the number of well-endowed young women anxious to exchange their wealth for the prospect of being addressed as your ladyship, and persistent was the pressure brought upon him by his parents to thus "ensure his future," and still more persistent their refusal to accept his conviction that marriage with one love was immoral. In this environment he was as unhappy as Stella had been in hers in America; and, like her, he finally came here in search of an environment more pleasing—coming experimentally at first, and remaining for the reason that he learned to love these lands of the sun.

And contact with elementary forces, with Nature naked and simple, gave him a glimpse of understanding he might never have otherwise obtained. He gained a new perspective, found the truth lay behind his suspicion that life as he had known it was out of drawing. What once had seemed of vastest importance had importance no longer.

But one attitude of his earlier life remained with him. This new world was a man's world. In it women of his own colour were the rarest phenomena. In the absence of the thing to measure he had no need to apply the gauge with which he measured other aspects of life. Consequently, the training of his adolescence that the marriage tie was inviolable, in all circumstances sacred, remained with him mainly in its orthodox and conventional condition.

David Wade was fighting a battle between a sense of right-doing and the call of beauty in distress, and, though he paced the sands till the sun went down behind the horizon like a great red plate, he came to no decision.

The bell for the evening meal summoned him to the hotel as the first of the quick tropic night came down. As he ascended the veranda steps, a native rushed down past him and towards the doctor's bungalow; and from Mrs. Blackney's room came a shrill screaming, a harsh and frantic screaming—the screaming of a woman terror-stricken and defiant by turns.

And then Wade entered upon an experience such as never he had encountered before or desired to encounter again, the first presaging of which came from the half-caste nurse who, coming from Mrs. Blackney's room, as running, he reached the door, said, with a nervous glancing behind her: "I am 'traid! 'Fraid! Never have I looked this kind of sickness. I not can stay."

The light of a lamp on a table showed on the walls of the room crude lithographs, on the floor native mats edged with threads of coloured wool, and in a bed having four tall posts supporting a mosquito-net, one end of which had fallen loose, the mother of Stella Blackney, sitting upright.

She was utterly dishevelled, the upper part of her sleeping-dress hanging in irregular strips, and her hair a tangle of disorder. Also, she had her hands out a little before her, with the fingers curved rigidly and her body swaying, as though she were exerting the whole of her strength in the grasping and fighting of something, the while her lips worked convulsively in the uttering of shrill denunciation alternated with piteous appeal for mercy.

Indeed, so vigorous and direct was the denunciation that for a moment Wade thought it aimed at himself. On realizing she was denouncing him, he stepped to the bed and with gentle force made her lay back. She resisted him easily, but the screaming ceased, though the clutching of her fingers continued, and the swaying of her body. Wade watched, awed to silence. From the doorway came a half-articulate uttering, and, the doctor behind him, O'Shane entered. The unsteadiness of his walk betraying the slowness of his sobriety, he shook a finger at the woman on the bed.

"It's the end of ye at last!" he began, in a tone of mocking raucous and on the doctor pulling him away from the bed, he stumbled to the wall and squatted on the floor. (To be continued.)

WOMAN OF 35 HAS BETTER CHANCE TO LIVE LONG THAN MAN OF SAME AGE

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International New Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 23.—A man of thirty-five has less chance of living to a ripe old age than a woman of thirty-five.

Now, this is discouraging news to pass out today to those middle-aged fellows who may be fussing over the appearance of gray hair around the temples, expanding waistlines and the cost of supporting the family.

But the truth is death is taking an increasing toll among adults in the prime of life and after middle age, according to the research department of the Milbank Memorial Fund, which bases its findings on data obtained from the Federal Census Bureau.

Dorothy G. Wiehl of the foundation's research staff presented an interesting report at a meeting held on the twenty-third anniversary of the establishment of the fund.

Eight principal reasons why men die quickly after middle age were given in the report. Sixty-five to eighty-five per cent of all the deaths in the United States are due, according to the report, to the following causes:

Tuberculosis.	Apoplexy.
Heart disease.	Pneumonia.
Cancer.	Nephritis.
Cerebral hemorrhage.	Accidents.

Deaths from these eight causes during the years 1921 and 1927 were subjected to detailed analysis to determine their comparative onslaught upon men and women in cutting down the expectancy of life after maturity. These years were chosen because they are the best health years so far experienced in the United States.

"Striking conditions were noted," said Miss Wiehl. "At every age the change is more favorable for females than for males, and this is particularly true for the ages of middle life."

"In the age group 35 to 44, the death rate for males in 1927 showed an increase of 12.5 per cent over the 1921 mortality as against a decrease in the female death rate of 4 per cent."

"At ages 45 to 54, the increase for males was 13.5 per cent compared with an increase of 2.5 per cent for females."

"Even at 25 to 34, a more favorable course in the female death rate was observed."

"Between 1921 and 1927, in the age group 55 to 74, the increase in deaths of men exceeded that of women by 320 per 100,000."

Miss Wiehl's report revealed that out of every 100,000 men aged 35 to 54 years in the population, 43 more died from heart disease alone in 1927 than died in 1921; 30 more died from accidents; 21 more died from pneumonia; 9 more died from cancer, making a total of 103 more deaths in each 100,000 population from these four causes alone.

"For males aged 55 to 74 years, a more striking increased loss of life is shown," said Miss Wiehl's report. "From heart disease, 319 more out of every 100,000 men of this age died in 1927 than in 1921; 90 more died from cancer; 61 more died from accidents; 42 more died from acute chronic nephritis; 33 more died from pneumonia and 17 more died from diabetes. The total net increase in loss of life was about 600 per each 100,000 of the male population aged 55 to 74."

No such increase in deaths from these causes occurred among the female population, according to the report.

Tuning in on the Talkies

THE talkies may have been forecast by Shakespeare when he wrote:

"Words, without thought, never to heaven go."

Nevertheless, in 1928 the movies were "Hell Bent for Heaven."

Last year they were "Half Way to Heaven."

This year's talkie, "So This Is Heaven," marks the arrival.

All of which flouts the prediction, made by some bad guessers, that the movies were voyaging to "Hell's Harbor."

Charlotte Merriam supports Dolores Costello in "Second Choice," her latest Vitaphone talkie.

And the daughter born to the Barrymore-Costello union is reported to be "Second Choice" in John Barrymore's message to the stork.

"Girls from the Hollies" include Marilyn Miller, Billie Dove and Dorothy Mackall, all First National stars.

Fence-Rail Talkies
Farmer Silo says: "I wonder why folks who come this way for hay fever are always sneezing at our climate?"

Are You One of These?
"Types" are in demand for talkies. The call is for: Crooks, police, society, military, collegiate, sporting, flappers, sheiks and just plain folks.

Another Coin Cidence

MINISTERS DECLARE PICTURES AID THEM

BOSTON, April 23—(INS)—That ministers experienced in their use find motion pictures highly efficient servants of religious education, a national committee of thirty-three clergymen, editors and educators, headed by Dr. Howard M. LeSourd, of the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service, declared in a report that followed a countrywide survey on the subject.

The Committee on the Use of Motion Pictures for Religious Education originated in New York last September at a motion picture conference of two hundred social, religious and educational leaders and is composed both of Catholics and Protestants who are in general agreement concerning the recommendations made.

The national study was conducted separately and the report is based upon returns from Protestant churches. The Catholic report is to be made later.

The report gives the results of the survey and discusses the present and possible future use of motion pictures at Sunday evening services in the church school and for missionary education.

The report is made to the motion picture industry and the public. Recommendations are based on the fundamental proposals "That the industry give more attention to the motion picture needs of the churches" and "that an independent committee be organized of men and women who know the mind and desires of the churches and who would be responsible" for certain co-operative work in obtaining pictures for use by the churches.

The committee included an explanatory paragraph or two which outlined the reasons for the survey.

"With the coming of motion pictures," the report states, "a few church leaders saw their possibilities for serving religious purposes. For more than fifteen years there has been a steady growth in their use. Through them congregations have been rebuilt and churches that seemed about to pass out of existence have taken on new life.

"Difficulties have been in the way but comparatively few who adopted motion pictures have abandoned their use. Instead, the demand for pictures has steadily increased. Every day new projectors are going into churches and some are already installing the expensive sound equipment. One of the present tests of a thoroughly modern church plant is the presence of adequate motion picture equipment."

The committee estimates that there are more than 2000 Protestant churches in the United States that use motion pictures with some degree of regularity.

Some ministers are adverse in their opinion regarding the motion pictures while a large majority seem willing to use those which are suitable and appropriate as an influence for good.

Returns from the questionnaires addressed to 1,426 Protestant ministers and churches, gives a very interesting account of the ways in which motion pictures are used in the Sunday evening services. Suggestions made by various ministers show that 218 held a short worship service before the picture, 140 built the service around the picture, 130 related the picture to the service. 171 gave a brief talk at the same hour, while 29 had nothing else at the time.

A Newportville man called on an optician to have his eyes tested. The optician held the test card 40 feet away and asked: "Can you read that?"

"No," said the man.

The optician came closer and closer but each time the answer was "No."

Finally he stuck the card under the man's nose and asked: "Well, can you read it now?"

"No," said the man, "I never learned to read!"

GRAHAM

After Three Years of Preparation Now Gives an Impressive Object Lesson in Greater Value-Giving

THERE could be no better time than this to give practical proof that by strict adherence to quality standards in massed manufacturing, motor cars can rise above commonplace quality and still be held down in price.

The way has been well paved for this exhibition of greater value-giving which the Graham brothers are now able to present, by nearly three years spent in perfecting their plant processes and by the manufacturing volume awarded by more than 160,000 owners.

Those valuable years, were preceded by more than 20 years in which they have tried earnestly to hold fast to the conviction that quality is the best policy in quantity production as in everything else.

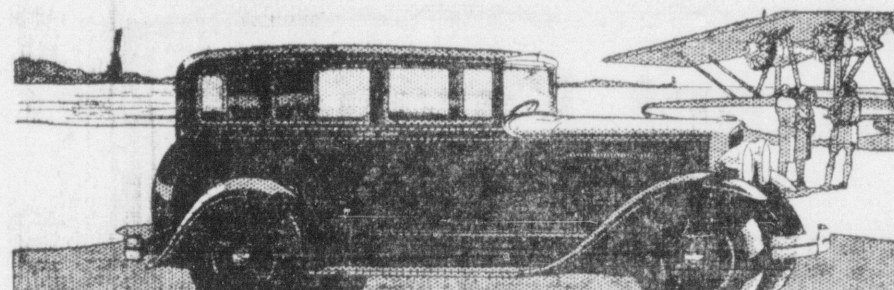

In those progressive years the Gramams have learned much of incalculable value. They owe all they have to their public and they pass on now, at a moment when they believe it will be most appreciated, the fruits of their experience, in a line of cars so obviously superior in value that they advertise themselves—at prices so strikingly attractive that they represent impressive object lessons in greater value-giving.

EVERY GRAHAM CAR IS COMPLETELY EQUIPPED WITH SHATTER-PROOF SAFETY PLATE GLASS

The Graham Standard Six Town Sedan—This beautiful car has 115-inch wheelbase, full five-passenger capacity, four wide doors, sturdy Graham-built body, with increased width and many exclusive features to insure long life. Two Ways to Spend Money on Streets

One is to keep on resurfacing and patching an old pavement. This is expensive, and the street is never satisfactory—never smooth.

The other is to repave with portland cement concrete. This is economical, because concrete is rigid and strong. It stays smooth as built. It is the safest pavement in bad weather.

Customer—How long must I wait for this prescription?

Druggist—About twenty minutes, sir. But we have a moving picture department where you can pass the time very pleasantly. Take the door on your left.

Police Judge—What instrument did your wife use to inflict these wounds on your head?

O'Halloran—She hit me with a mallet, yer honor.

Police Judge—A mallet? And what is a mallet, may I ask?

O'Halloran—A mallet is a frame, yer honor, like a pitcher, only inside it says, "God Bless Our Home."

Money talks, but not as much as man talks money.

To cure a cold in one day take fifty grains of strychnine at one dose.

Here is one way to test your loyalty to your job. Suppose your boss was out of town and the team was playing at home—would you work?

Doctor—I'll have to charge you $50 for improving your hearing.

Patient—"What?"

Doctor—I say, your bill is $50.

Patient—Can't hear you, sir.

Doctor—Then I won't charge you a cent.

Patient—Thanks, doctor!

The burglar, finding the lady in her bath, covered her with his revolver.

He—"What would your mother say if she saw you smoking?"

She—"She'd say, 'Did you offer the young man a cigarette?'"

Townsend put in Narcisi, who made an impressive debut. It is believed that Harte pulled a muscle in his back. The Cardinal and Gray hurler, considered the weakest biter on the team, came through yesterday with three safe blows over the infield, all singles.

"Pete" Haeftner did most of the damage against the Bristol team. He had a perfect day with the bat, collecting four straight hits, one a double, the only extra base hit of the game. He drove in most of Langhorne's runs and was credited with two stolen bases. The only flaw in his day's work was an error after handling eleven chances at the initial sack.

Carter did brilliant defensive work for the losers.

On Friday on the home field, Bristol High will meet Morrisville High in the battle for first place.

MEYER AND DE PAOLA WILL STAR IN CLASSIC

By James L. Kilgallen

I. N. S. Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Apr. 23.—Speed and thrills!

These are the elements that will form the chief attraction for the many thousands of persons who will witness the International 500-mile automobile race at the Motor Speedway in Indianapolis on May 30. It will be the eighteenth annual running of the classic and is designated by Europe as "the American Grand Prize."

The fastest American and European cars will be entered and a great race is anticipated. The American defense against foreign invasion of the speedway racing laurels are built around two daredevils—Louis Meyer and Peter De Paola.

Meyer, only 25 years old, champion in 1928 and 1929 and winner of the 1929 Indianapolis race, will defend his title with a 16-cylinder car. He will be ready to take the track for test spins within a few days. De Paola, champion in 1925 and 1927 and winner of the 1925 Indianapolis race in which he established the existing record of 101.13 miles an hour for the distance, is grooming a Duesenberg for the contest.

Other American stars are planning their campaigns and already Louis Schneider, an Indianapolis driver, has his car at the track, running it a few laps every day. Many new faces will be seen in the race this year. Some old time drivers are planning to return and there is a stampede of youngsters to gain cars.

Many close followers of the annual speed classic believe the record of 101.13 miles an hour for the distance will be broken this year. The American drivers are taking seriously the foreign threat, especially the 16-cylinder Maserati. Italy is sending a crack team of two drivers to man the Maserati, the fastest car in Europe. It gained that distinction by speeding 152.85 miles an hour in a flying start over a ten kilometer course at Cremona.

New specifications for the race will permit of a varied size and shape of cars and, for the first time in seven years, the rules demand two man cars. This means each driver will have to carry a mechanic beside him every mile of the competition.

The riding mechanic is the driver's "eyes" in the back of his head. He warns of approaching cars—machines capable of overtaking and passing the one in which he is riding. The "single seater" mounts of the past seven years caused many unnecessary and dangerous situations when cars were attempting to pass each other.

More than fifty cars are under construction for the race. Heretofore only thirty-three cars have been permitted to start at Indianapolis. This year, however, the American Automobile Association, the governing body of the great gasoline sport, has decreed that forty cars may ride the 2½ mile Indianapolis track with its two long straightaways, two short straightaways and four connecting quarter turns. They will line up in fourteen rows of three cars each, with one car in the fourteenth row.

Only the forty fastest entries are allowed to start. The starting position of the various cars—with the fastest cars forward—is determined the week preceding the race when each car rides a ten mile trial against the clock.

South America, as well as Europe, will be presented in this year's classic. Jean Gaudino, recent winner for the second time of the Grand Primo Nacional, a strenuous 800-mile road race in the Argentine, will be South America's entry. He is regarded as eminently fitted for the gruelling contest.

Prize money at Indianapolis totals $100,000. Of this sum $85,000 is put up by the Speedway, $20,000 by Indianapolis citizens and various divisions of the automotive industry and the additional $20,000 is in accessory prizes. The accessory prizes is added money contributed by firms whose product is used on the victorious cars. The $20,000 put up by Indianapolis is divided into 200 prizes of $100 each, the money being awarded the driver bringing his car first across the tape in each lap of the race. This has the effect of making a race "within a race" with every lap a race.

A big "gate" is anticipated. Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, America's flying ace during the World War, a former racing star and now president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway organization, said today that advance sales of seats is 25 per cent in excess of the corresponding time last year.

"I think we will have a record crowd at Indianapolis this year," said Captain Rickenbacker. "I am in hearty sympathy with the new racing rules and specifications. The public fancy is caught by the riding mechanic—the second man in the car—whose wild gestures, signalling his pit and aiding the driver in every possible manner. The riding mechanic adds zest to the race."

"HERO ONE DAY, BUM THE NEXT," SAYS BABE RUTH

By Henry McEmore

I. N. S. Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Apr. 23.—Others have couched the same idea in more distinguished words but it is doubtful if the fickleness of Fate has ever been more aptly put than by Babe Ruth when he said:

"One day you're a hero, the next day you're a bum. So what the hell."

Inelegant words, those, but to the point. The Big Man's philosophy was uttered, no doubt, following one of his numerous strikeouts when the crowd, forgetting the many times he didn't strikeout or the numerous occasions upon which he broke up the ball game by propelling a fast one into Mrs. Jones' backyard, rose to its feet in a loud and prolonged razzberry.

Any of those suspicious souls doubting the truth of Ruth's philosophy should have attended the opening game of the season between the Braves and Giants. No less than three concrete examples of Babe's wisdom were in evidence during the afternoon.

In the opening inning Marshall lifted a lazy, low fly to short centerfield. Jimmy Welsh, Brave outfielder, playing deep, came in under topspeed. With the ball only a few feet off the ground and dropping fast, Welsh made a flying tackle, slid along the grass for half a block and came up with the ball. The crowd, appreciating such a sensational catch, cheered lustily. Jimmy was a hero.

The applause was still going on when Leach dropped a high one into Welsh's lap—and he muffed it. The tenor of the cheering changed instantaneously. Jimmy was now a goat.

"Get him a peach basket," and "Think, he spent all spring practicing," were a few of the remarks hurled at the hero of a minute ago.

Welsh will tell you Ruth knew what he was talking about.

So will Andy Cohen who watched the opening game from a seat in the grandstand. Slumped in his chair, cap pulled low over his forehead, Andy listened to the crowd roar approval when Marshall, rookie second baseman, scored the winning run in the ninth.

What were Cohen's thoughts? He'd be a little shy of human if in his mind's eye he didn't picture the opening game of two years back when he, a rookie like Marshall, fresh from college, was carried triumphantly off the field on the shoulders of admirers. His was an auspicious debut. Even more so than Marshall's. For Andy, in addition to fielding faultlessly, got a couple of hits, one a home run.

Next day in the press Andy's name like Abou Ben Adhem's led all the rest. He was a hero. Of the purest sort. Stories of his life from boyhood to stardom appeared simultaneously in several dailies.

Yet there he was on opening day waiting for the International League men.

to open the next day when he would go to third base for the Newark Bears. Just across the River from the major leagues, but a hard river to cross.

Yes, Andy Cohen will tell you Ruth knew what he was talking about.

So will George Sisler. The same Sisler who in 1922 hit .420 and was voted the most valuable man in the American League. When the Braves and the Giants took the field Sisler continued playing catch with a rookie on the sidelines. Out on first base was Johnny Neun. Neun, who eight years ago couldn't have carried Sisler's bat. "One day you're a hero, the next day you're a bum. So what the hell."

POLLYANNA

"I enjoy a quiet smoke," said a man to a fellow passenger in a railway train.

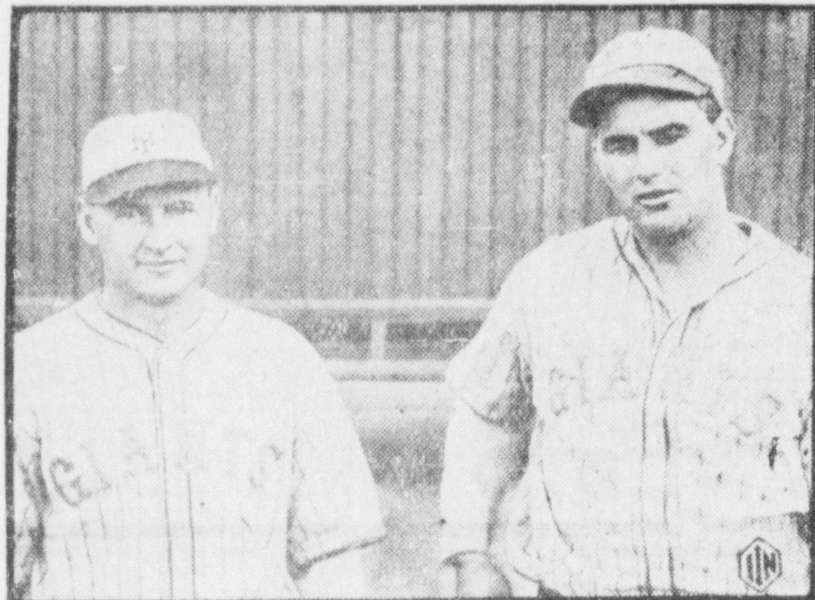

"Well," said the stranger, "you will never be troubled with crowds while you smoke cigars of that brand."

Windmills are decreasing in number in Holland, but those at banquet tables seem to hold their own.

Love feeds on love, declares a Pond street man. Father-in-law says different.

LONG BEFORE the choice leaves of golden Turkish and velvety brown Domestic tobacco are selected for Camel Cigarettes, nature's own alchemy has worked a miracle in them that no effort of man can hope to duplicate.

Every tiny leaf-cell is irradiated—stored full of goodness by the clean, pure vigor of the sun!

Our share in the making of Camels is to see that all of the fragrance, mildness, mellowness, aroma—in a word all of the natural goodness of these sun-ripened tobaccos is preserved and developed—then to combine them into the smooth, delightful harmony of the famous Camel blend, and manufacture them into cigarettes by the most modern methods known to the industry.

You can taste the natural goodness in every delicious puff of a Camel Cigarette.
